Traditionally, trade has been a document-intensive and paper-driven process with the various stakeholders in the ecosystem operating independently to generate and process the required documents.

Over the last decade, while businesses have largely adopted the digital pathway, the intermediaries like banks and financial institutions tasked with the facilitation and settlement of trade transactions, are still largely dependent on physical documents.

To be effective, digital trade needs digitisation of documents and digitalisation of systems and processes to enable a seamless end-to-end flow. Digitalisation can significantly improve process efficiency as well as regulatory compliance.

The proposed webinar aims to bring together thought leaders and key stakeholders in a discussion on the way forward for digitisation and digitalisation of trade.
